Moving forward, we will continue to work hand-in-hand with all sectors of society to cultivate more outstanding talent for Macau.”

The collaboration focuses on two key areas: parenting education and school-corporation partnerships. Under the parenting education initiative, GEG will work with DSEDJ to formulate training programs and organize a series of parenting education and family-friendly activities to promote a culture of work-life balance and family well-being. On the day of the signing ceremony, GEG also hosted a parenting education seminar under the professional guidance of DSEDJ to help team members acquire effective parenting skills and foster harmonious family relationships.

Regarding school-corporation partnerships, GEG will collaborate with the four local secondary schools to promote vocational and technical education programs, offering students internship and employment opportunities, professional guidance, and curriculum support. This initiative will further strengthen the local talent development mechanism and enhance the cultivation of skilled professionals in Macau.

Throughout the years, GEG has continued to invest resources in organizing, supporting, and participating in a wide range of activities that promote professional development and work-life balance among team members, including parent-child workshops and parenting education seminars. Upholding the philosophy of “what is taken from the community is to be used for the community”, GEG also actively collaborates with various government departments and community organizations to promote youth development initiatives in areas such as national education, science popularization, sports, arts and culture, and community service. These efforts aim to empower the younger generation to enhance their personal and professional capabilities, discover their interests, build confidence, and broaden their horizons.
